Florida Institute of CPAs Presents Women to Watch Award to Allison Harrell

ORLANDO, Fla. – Allison Harrell, CPA, of Tallahassee has received the Florida Institute of CPAs (FICPA) Women to Watch Emerging Leader Award. The award, which is given in conjunction with the American Institute of CPAs (AICPA), recognizes outstanding women who are shaping the FICPA and the certified public accounting profession.

“We are thrilled to present Allison with this award,” said FICPA President/CEO Deborah Curry, CPA, CGMA. “We so appreciate her valuable service to our organization, and to our profession.”

Harrell is director, assurance services at Thomas Howell Ferguson, PA. She has served as a member and chair of the FICPA’s Young CPA Committee. Under her leadership, the FICPA furthered its recognition of the importance of developing young leaders in the CPA profession.

Nationally, Harrell represented Florida and the FICPA as a member of the AICPA’s inaugural Leadership Academy. She served as chair of the AICPA’s inaugural Edge Conference and recently was appointed as the youngest member of the Executive Committee of the AICPA’s Government Audit Quality Center.

As a member of Leadership Tallahassee, Harrell helps connect CPAs to organizations where professional leadership is most needed.

About the FICPA

Founded in 1905, the Florida Institute of CPAs is a Tallahassee-based, statewide, professional association representing member-CPAs throughout Florida. With a membership of more than 18,000 CPAs, the Institute’s mission is to serve the diverse needs of its members; enhance their competency and professionalism; support professional standards; promote the value of our members; and advocate on behalf of the profession.
